Stabenow for Senate Releases First Television Ad Highlights Stabenow Commitment to Issues That Matter

Lansing—Senator Debbie Stabenow today unveiled the first television ad of her 2006 re-election campaign. In the ad, entitled “Leader,” Senator Stabenow discusses her continued fight for the issues that matter to the people of Michigan: Leveling the playing field on trade for our manufactures, reducing health care costs so that our businesses can be more competitive, and providing more resources for education to fuel our innovative spirit and create opportunities for our children. In “Leader,” Senator Stabenow states:

“Times are tough in Michigan – but so are we.

“With a level playing field – our workers can compete with anybody.

“That’s why I’m fighting for a trade prosecutor – to crack down on countries that violate our trade laws.

“To reduce health care costs – to help Michigan businesses compete.

“And invest in education – so our children have a chance to get ahead.

“I’m Debbie Stabenow and I approve this message because we’ve got a great future here in Michigan and I’m fighting for it everyday.”

“Leader” will be running in the Detroit, Lansing, Grand Rapids, Flint and Traverse City Markets.

“Voters have a clear choice in this election,” said Stabenow Spokesperson Brent Colburn, “On one hand they have someone who will support the tired and failed policies of the Bush administration that have cost us jobs and threatened our way of life. On the other hand, they have a Senator who has stood up and fought for the issues that matter to them, like protecting good paying jobs, making health care more accessible and affordable, and ensuring that education is a real priority. This television ad is just one more step in Senator Stabenow’s continued fight to protect the Michigan way of life.”
